INFORMATION RELATING TO THE VA-RIOUS INTERESTS OF THE FARM.

A Plan for Cold Storage That Changes the Damp, Still Air of the Old Style Room to a Dry and Circulating Atmos-

The vulnerable point in most plans for refrigerator buildings is placing the metal ice floor in direct contact with the air of the storage room, causing condensation, drip and a damp room. In the cut here given are shown the essential features of a storage room recently described by Country Gentleman.

SECTIONAL VIEW OF A STORAGE ROOM. The point aimed at is to prevent conlensation in the storage room by completely isolating the ice chamber above, so that we may conduct the warm, moist and foul air away from the storage room and dash it upon a large body of ice, which will condense the foul moisture, contract the volume of air and permit the heavy, dry, cold air to tumble down into a storage room, where it will displace and force above the ice a quantity of moist, warm air, to be condensed as before, thus keeping up a constant current of air, which will pick up any moisture in the room and conduct it to the ice to be condensed.

The cut is a sectional view of the storage room (A) and ice chamber (B). The building, or complete room, must be sur-rounded by nonconducting space beneath the floor and over the ceiling, as well as at the side and end walls; then on the joist which some would cover with zinc, lay an air tight wood floor (C) from end to end of the building, but let it lack one foot or less of coming to the wall at either side, and let the floor incline to one side about one inch in ten feet to secure proper drainage.

On this floor place strips two or three inches high directly over the joist; put cross strips between these strips to form pockets of dead air. On this lay another tight floor; on the more elevated edge or side of the floor erect a double wall (D) (with confined air between) to within one or two feet of the ceiling of the building, and extending from end to end of building. Cover the floor and a few inches of the walls around it with a well soldered tin floor, and immediately paint it.

At the lower edge of the floor, where the cold air tumbles off, place eave spouting to carry drainage to a conducting pipe which may pass through the wall to the outside of building and terminate near the bottom of some vessel that will bring the overflow of water above the end of pipe, and thus form an air trap. At either side of storage room hinge boards (B B) wide enough to close up the inlet and outlet of air. The ingress of cold air can thus be adjusted to hold the temperature of the room at any desired degree.

Trentment of Lambs. Springle a little salt on the lamb so the mother will be induced to lick it. To make a ewe take another lamb after she has lost her own, tie the skin of the latter on the "adopted" youngster. If at | any time the lamb is weak and sickly give it half a spoonful of hog's lard. Repeat the dose in half an hour if no better, as this cuts all phlegm, makes breathing more easy and gives strength and tone to the system. But of all things there is nothing like sunshine for brand owned young lambs, as this gives them more e M. Ochon, strength and growth than anything else. Should they get chilled at any time give them some rum with a little asafetida dissolved in it. Manure should not be allowed to accumulate in the barn, as the gases arising from it are very unhealthful. It is one of the most prolific causes of bad outcome with pregnant ewes, failure of milk, disowning of lambs, shedding of wool and perhaps death. We would say, in conclusion, that there are but three short periods each year that sheep require any extra attention-that is, breeding season, lambing time and wearing time.

Remedy for Cut Worms. Some farmers protect cabbage plants from the ravages of cut worms by winding a piece of paper or bark or a bit of burdock leaf around the plants when set. The cut worms work on the surface cle and B D. of the soil or directly beneath it, and when they come to the article which envelops the plant, will go in search of something more palatable. We have always succeeded in keeping them away by using a small quantity of saltpeter water around each plant. An ounce of saltpeter dissolved in a teacupful of hot water is sufficient to impregnate two gallons of water. A gill of this solution poured around each hill an inch or so from the plant is sufficient, or has always proved so with us. It is an inexpensive remedy and easily applied .-

THE PEACH YELLOWS.

Two of the Leading Symptoms of the True Disease The literature of peach yellows is a medley of contradictions. All sorts of views have been formulated and many theories have been built on a very slender basis. Among the facts believed to be well established are:

That yellows has been confounded with other diseases of the peach, especially in New Jersey, where the Lorer and root appis are very prevalent. That of Bostonites or the Dutch-Irish-Enggenuine peach yellows appeared in the lish and altogether cosmopolitan people vicinity of Philadelphia prior to 1731. of New York. "I'll split the difference with you." "Well, I'll sign, but I want a proviso inserted that I do not hereby lose my self respect, and that I do not forfeit the right to come up stairs and strike the man in the next room if I get hard up." It was added, and he signed and went off to strike a free lunch counter. - De-

The English Language.

English men of letters are perpetually scolding and nagging at one another for speaking and writi: English, or for onouncing it erron - y, and the fault finders make, as a rule, as many mistakes as do the writers and speakers whom they profess to correct. And then step in, forsooth, the Americans, clad from top to toe in the shining armor of self confidence, and they airily tell us that we know not how to speak or pronounce our own language, and that to mend our ways we should take lessons

The more violent the attack who slur and shuffle their syllables into the more early and numerous will be the one another, who almost invariably put prematures. A second symptom is the the wrong emphasis on the chief memstriking out of unnatural shoots from the bers of a phrase, and who, if they do not main branches and sometimes from the absolutely chew and swallow the ends of stem of the tree. These are long and their vocables, as the modern Greeks do, slender, and usually issue from the upper utter them in such a disjointed and slipshod fashion as to make them more than half unintelligible to the foreign car. There Is a Difference.

There was a jolly little group about a table in a down town cafe last night stock and top should be suited to each shaking dice for the lemonade. The man who threw the lowest number had to pay for the lemonade and tell a story. All at the table had been "stuck" but one gentleman who is noted for his keenness of repartee. The gentlemen who had been "stuck" told nothing but anecdotes and antique tales. Not a new story had been recited; and they were all chestannexed engraving from Popular Gar-nuts. When the gentleman noted for repartee had been "stuck" there was applause, a call for drinks and a demand for a new story. "I can tell a story, said the gentleman, as he ordered the proper thing, "but I'll ask you a conun-"Go ahead," he was told. "Well," he went on, "what is the difference between a turkey and a man?" This odd conundrum floored the crowd.
